JOSEPH C. HUTCHESON JR. PAPERS
1853-1979, bulk 1900-1970

Extent: 10.5 linear ft. (25 boxes).

Biographical Sketch: Joseph C. Hutcheson, Jr. (1879-1973), a nationally known jurist and legal scholar, served as federal judge for the Southern District of Texas (1918-1931) and on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit (1931-1964), including 12 years as chief judge (1948-1959). He authored three books and numerous articles for legal journals, including an influential 1929 Legal Realist essay on the role of the "hunch" in judicial decisions. Valedictorian of the Class of 1900 at The University of Texas School of Law, Hutcheson practiced law in his native Houston from 1900 to 1918, most of that time in partnership with his father, and was elected mayor of Houston in 1917. In 1946 he served as co-chairman of the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry on Jewish Problems in Palestine and Europe, which studied the suitability of Palestine as a homeland for Jewish refugees from the Holocaust.

Scope and Content: A large part of the collection relates to Hutcheson's service on the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry on Jewish Problems in Palestine and Europe (1922-1968, bulk 1944-1948; 3 linear ft.). It includes correspondence; memoranda; photographs; printed documents; publications; speeches by Hutcheson; transcripts of hearings held in the U.S., Europe, and the Middle East; reports by the committee; and reports submitted to the committee by other bodies including the Jewish Agency for Palestine and the American Jewish Committee. Personal & business materials (1853-1979, bulk 1900-1970; 2.7 linear ft.) include correspondence, financial records, legal documents, and clippings relating to Hutcheson's personal, business, legal, judicial, professional, civic, and family affairs, particularly family business and Hutcheson's private law practice. Correspondence with fellow judges and court officials relate to Fifth Circuit administration, his retirement in 1964, his judicial philosophy, and his possible appointment to the U.S. Supreme Court; and includes a folder of correspondence with Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr. In addition, there is biographical material on Hutcheson's family, especially his father, Joseph C. Hutcheson, Sr., a state legislator, congressman, and prominent Houston attorney. Speech & article materials (1893, 1934-1960; 1.3 linear ft.) include drafts and correspondence. Printed materials (1920-1970; 3 linear ft.) include almost all of Hutcheson's legal articles, published copies of his speeches, articles about Hutcheson, and publications on Palestine.

Provenance: Gift of Joseph C. Hutcheson, III, July 1996. Originally acquired by the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, University of Texas at Austin, in the late 1970s-early 1980s, and transferred to the Tarlton Law Library in December 1995.
